

Storytelling Intensive Workshop

Discovering people's stories is essential to sustaining relationships, residing in community and working together.

Story provides the foundation for how we organise ourselves to get to life's business done. In an increasingly complex world, the practice of sitting together and intentionally putting ourselves into a narrative context is an critical leadership skill.

Circle is the practice of creating space where every voice is heard. It is the study of listening as much as it is the practice of speaking.

Story offers a way to hear what's really being said; a means to recognise and appreciate the essence of identity; a way of knowing that we know each other.

Woven together, circle and story facilitate a deep shift in how we come together in groups, especially in times of change and transition.

Join Ann Linnea and Christina Baldwin (authors and co-founders of PeerSpirit Inc) to guide a day or practice and skill-building in the art of circle and story.

Experience circle and storycatching as two complementary methodologies that can be powerfully woven together

Learn the essence of each methodology and the art of adapting circle and story in different context

Extend the network of practitioners who are utilising these methods and supporting each other in furthering their use.
